Future Career Goal: To serve as an agricultural education teacher in an urban school system and as an advocate for agriculture and agricultural education on the local, state and national levels.

Laila Hajji didn't aspire to have such a decorated FFA resume. In fact, she stumbled across the organization by accident when she was placed in an agriculture class. She had no idea then that it would eventually lead her to find her purpose in life: to serve students. She will have more than enough opportunities to do just that while she serves as the National FFA Organization's 2008-2009 Central Region Vice President. Throughout her year of service, she will have many chances to speak about FFA across the country about the significant role FFA can play in students' lives.. Along with serving as a reliable teammate and giving 100 percent, she hopes to continue to raise awareness of the need for the growth of agricultural education in urban school systems throughout the country.
